Geo-Coach

Reporting to the Precision Services Division Manager, you will be responsible for generating profitable sales through the identification and presentation of products and services geared to meet or exceed client needs and expectations. As Geo-Coach, you will work with the technology and data used in precision agriculture to build client presentations and ensure their understanding and acceptance of precision agriculture data and technology. Your role is to make sure clients do not get confused or overwhelmed, and that they are maximizing the potential of the resources available to them. You will build and retain mutually beneficial partnerships and relationships with a portfolio of clients.

This position requires a post-secondary degree or diploma in Agriculture, Agriculture Technology, Geographic Information Systems or related area. You must have excellent computer skills, patience for technology and a willingness to be part of a team effort and solution. Knowledge of farming practices and innovative thinking, coupled with an understanding of basic GIS techniques, plant function, fertilizer use, and pest control will support your success in the position. Your competencies include strength in customer service, adapting to change, successful communications and teamwork/cooperation.
